

With apparantly over 80% of Wisconsin's residents registering on the "Wisconsin Do Not Call" list, it is obvious we don't want telemarketers and we don't want our law weakened. The increase in telemarketing calls during the recent political campaign further strengthened our dislike of these calls.

Of particular concern now are telemarketing calls that are recorded messages so you are forced to listen to the entire message if you want to file a claim. Companies using this type of telemarketing should be penalized with even higher fines.

Since over 80% of the people in Wisconsin are opposed to telemarketing calls, any company or organization selling or giving out phone numbers to another company should be fined as heavily as those companies violating the "Do Not Call" law.
